Flamin' Groovy - Back in Action...

Guitarist and multi instrumentalist Chris Wilson is the ex-singer of the best-remembered line-up San Francisco's cult classic band The Flamin' Groovies and a long-term member of The Barracudas, another band with a dedicated and loyal fan base that stretches right around the world.

His musical career's highlights include the classic Flamin' Groovies album Shake Some Action [1976] - one of the finest pop albums of its time - while his songs and music have appeared in Hollywood movies, including Clueless [1995], and are repeatedly covered by other bands.

Now resident in North London, the US-born musician continues to gig and record - his most recent venture into the studio resulting in a new album, Second Life.

The album mixes classic 60s-tinged rock and roll, 12-string guitars and blues with a hint of folk and country - everything that made the Flamin' Groovies so well loved. It's more of the same but new...

"This is my first time back into the studio since the last Barracudas' album in 2005 and it's my first solo CD since 1993," said Chris Wilson. "It's been a long time coming but for fans of The Flamin' Groovies and The Barracudas it'll be no surprise - Second Life continues along exactly the same lines. In fact, I think this is the best work I've done for a very long time. It was certainly the most fun.

"People keep asking me if there's any chance of a Groovies reunion... and you know what, when I'm working with a band as good as my current one why should I revisit the past? The album's not called Second Life for nothing."

The album was produced by Dick Coppin [ex of Tenpole Tudor and King Kurt].

Fan reaction...

Chris and co have created some good vibes here. It's a real 'Aftermath' - as good and varied as 'Exile On Main Street'.

It really is a great sounding record, especially the bass on the first cut. Chris sounds in great voice and the uptempo tunes are all gems.

To me there are three highlights - the one-two punch of the opening rockers All The Action and Shake That Feeling; the Barracudas-sounding Set Free followed by a killer version of Never Love Again; and lastly, my favorite part, Under The Power Lines, Visions Of Johanna and the closer, While There's Life. An excellent comeback for Chris!

Great songwriting, great musicianship. Thanx to the Chris Wilson trio for those good vibes.
